Delhi govt to boost affordable goods, jobs through cooperative stores: Min

AIMAN FATIMA

NEW DELHI: In a move aimed at strengthening the cooperative sector's role in public welfare, Delhi's Cooperation minister, Ravinder Indraj Singh, held a key review meeting on Friday with officials of the Delhi Consumers Cooperative Wholesale Store Ltd. (DCCWS). The focus of the discussion was on providing affordable, high-quality goods to the public and enhancing employment generation through cooperative initiatives.

Singh directed the DCCWS to make concerted efforts to supply essential daily items at low prices via its wholesale and retail outlets. "The department should ensure the availability of high-quality goods at reasonable prices and explore all necessary possibilities to provide relief to the general public," he said.

The minister emphasised that employment generation should be a parallel priority alongside making essential items more accessible. "DCCWS should focus on preparing manpower and providing employment opportunities through its skill development centers," he stated.

Highlighting the broader national vision, Singh referenced Union Home and Cooperation Minister Amit Shah's emphasis on strengthening the cooperative movement as a tool for self-reliance. "As part of the meeting, the minister also proposed an expansion plan to reach more communities through education-focused initiatives. He advised DCCWS to explore opening stationery outlets in schools and colleges, especially those operating on land allotted by the government at concessional rates or on lease.
